January Evergreen Camera Club Program presented by Jeff Johnson

The January program was presented by Jeff Johnson of jeffjohnsonfineart.com. What made Jeff's program different is his commitment to fine art photography that involves post processing to create an image that is unique and creative, rather than an image that is basically as the camera records it. His images are not surreal, but they are dynamic and dramatic in the manipulations Jeff makes as he endeavors to create the beauty our eyes see in real life.

Even better, is that Jeff will conduct a day-long workshop on February 2nd to learn the manipulations that can create a work of art with our own pictures. The workshop will be at the Evergreen Fire & Rescue, and the cost is $85. Watch for info through MeetUp and our January newsletter.

To illustrate the type of images Jeff produces, he presented 300 "Best of the Best" works of the American Society of Photographers of which he is a member. The gallery of images can be reviewed online at americansocietyofphotographers.com

Two tidbits Jeff wanted us to take from his presentation were that previsualization of the image in its finished state should be part of the plan for the look we want before we even take an image. And that the bottom line is to make the viewer see your image as you experienced it in nature. Jeff's workshop on February 2nd should be very interesting!
